I am about to graduate from university in Germany with a Bachelor in Computer Science. I am currently employed as a senior software developer at a European company. My company is looking to move to Australia for a new position, but I have been approached by my manager and also by HR at a company in The Netherlands. My question is: Why would moving to The Netherlands be better than moving to Australia for my career? A: I assume that you already have the university degree. This could be a degree from a non-English speaking country, like the Ukraine or Poland. If the company in Australia does have some English language ability, then you need to start looking for other positions. If they have the English language skills, they will be looking for someone with a European degree. If they do not have English language skills, they will be looking for someone with an Australian 82157476af
